ISSUES
• Designing a comfortable, pleasant experience for customers while meeting the company’s food service preparation needs
• Specifying a durable, high-performing product that stands up to the daily wear and tear of a busy food service environment
• Choosing a material that is readily available worldwide

CHALLENGES
• Selecting a surfacing material that can be fabricated to incorporate a variety of distinct applications, including measuring stick and pretzel-shaped inlays that function as a template
• Identifying a cost-effective surface that is easy to keep clean, is scratch-resistant and is easily buffed, polished and renewed
• Finding a surface that meets commercial food service and fire safety code requirements

SOLUTIONS
• DuPont™ Corian® is versatile, meeting unlimited design requirements—from custom inlays and edge treatments, to attractive countertops—helping to create a signature look
• Corian® offers heat-, stain-, scratch-, and chip-resistance necessary to keep high-traffic areas clean and looking new
• Corian® is distributed around the world, allowing architects and designers to achieve a consistent, uniform look at all international locations

BENEFITS
• The design flexibility of Corian® helps create a practical, yet sophisticated atmosphere. Corian® can be routed, carved, sandblasted or laser etched to fulfill any size or shape requirement
• Corian®, a solid, nonporous surface, can be maintained with minimum care to retain the original appearance
• Corian® is NSF/ANSI 51 Certified for food contact and is Class I (A) fire-rated
